They look after the information collected about the objects and carry out research based on the object or stories and their history e.g. who owned it, who made it, where it came from, what it was used for. The curator makes the objects and information available to the public and community through a wide variety of ways including exhibitions, events, websites and publications. A curator encourages engagement by the public (getting people involved) and collecting new objects, whilst also safeguarding them for future generations to enjoy through preservation and conservation.	Visits or Teams chats with teachers/ children If she doesn't know the answer – she'll know someone who does.
